PROFESSOR: Magnificent. You are magnificent. You are exquisite. I congratulate you warmly, miss. There's scarcely any point in going on. At addition you are a past master. Now, let's look at subtraction. Tell me, if you are not exhausted, how many are four minus three? PUPIL: Four minus three? . . .

every day. The other characters, also, are what Ionesco calls archetypes. The most resonant lesson of The Lesson is conveyed by its circular structure and embodied in the stout Maid, or instinct, who opens doors, is the strongest authority, and is on the stage both first and last. The cyclical structure of the play implies
