Grey goo (also spelled gray goo) is a hypothetical end-of-the-world scenario involving molecular nanotechnology in which out-of-control self-replicating robots consume all biomass on Earth while building more of themselves, a scenario that has been called ecophagy ("eating the environment", more literally "eating the habitation"). The original idea assumed machines were designed to have this ...

The engineering design process is a methodical series of steps that engineers use in creating functional products and processes. The process is highly iterative - parts of the process often need to be repeated many times before another can be entered - though the part(s) that get iterated and the number of such cycles in any given project may vary. ...

A Test Scenario is defined as any functionality that can be tested. It is also called Test Condition or Test Possibility. As a tester, you may put yourself in the end user's shoes and figure out the real-world scenarios and use cases of the Application Under Test.

Extreme programming (XP) introduced the practice of expressing requirements in the form of user stories, short descriptions of functionality-told from the perspective of a user-that are valuable to either a user of the software or the customer of the software. The following are typical user stories for a job posting and search site:

It's probably a bit messy rolling your own regexp to test for a number, but the code below might work. I think the other solution by Gabe involving a user defined function is more robust since you are using the built in Oracle functionality (and my regexp is probably not 100% correct) but it might be worth a go:
